Introduction

A growing number of people have developed an interest in genealogy. Our society has grown accustomed to instant answers in an age where information is readily available through the Internet. Unfortunately, early records, such as vital statistics, can be difficult to obtain through the Internet. Birth, death and marriage records are generally located at county court houses, state archives or family histories (and bibles). Access to these records can be restricted to business hours during the week. On the other hand, local cemeteries are readily accessible to the public most of the time. This fact has made the gravestone a standard research tool of the genealogist for most grave markers list birth and/ or death dates. A husband and wife often share a common marker, while family members can be often be found in close proximity within a common cemetery. References to family ties (husband, wife, son, daughter, maiden names) or military service are sometimes carved on the gravestone.

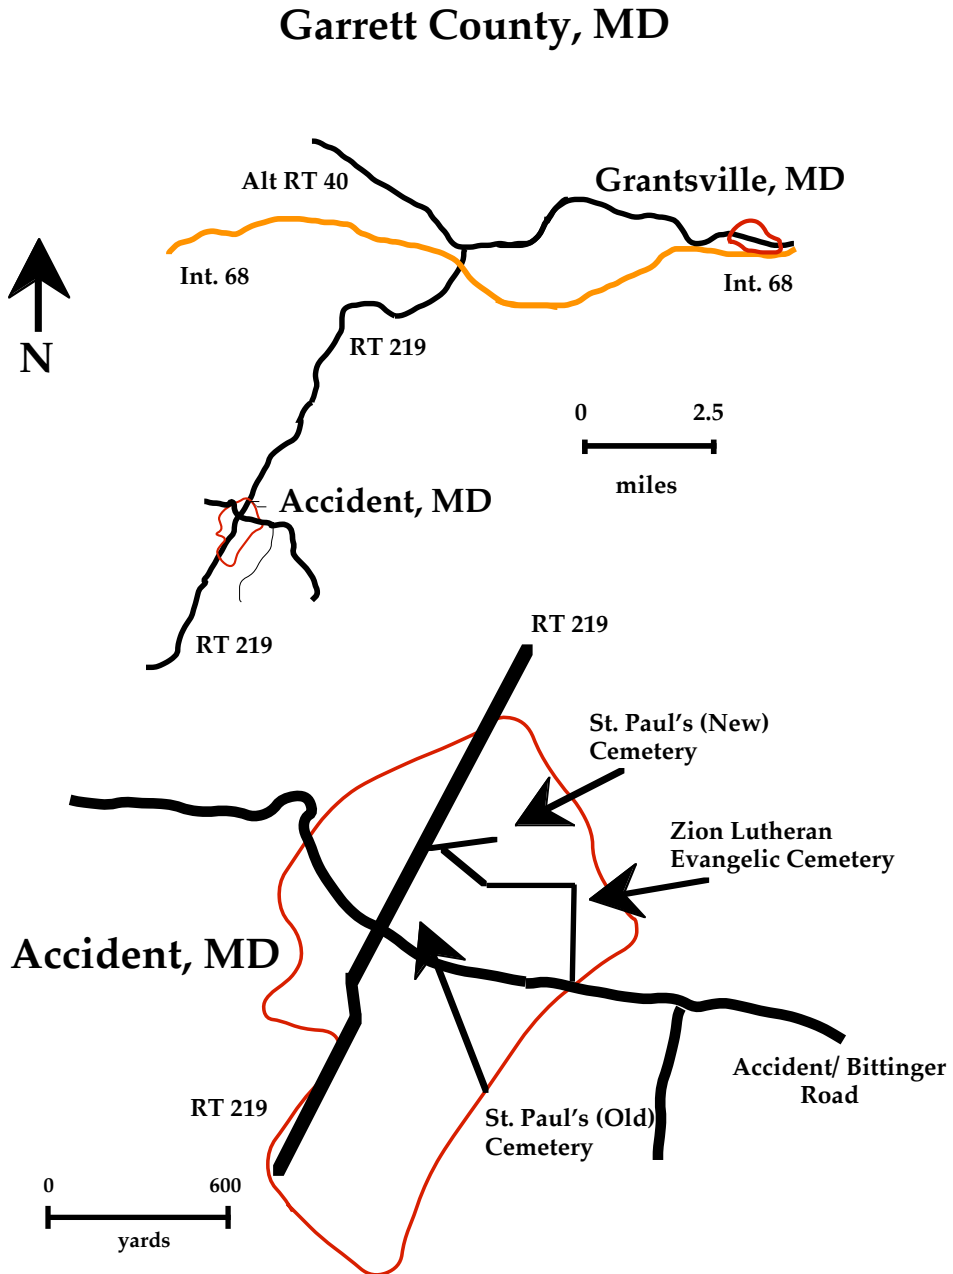

Unfortunately, travelling from cemetery to cemetery can be a time consuming process that can prove fruitless. Many genealogist I have talked with have spent countless hours driving to the same cemeteries to collect the same information. The Garrett County Daughters of the American Revolution (DAR) have published two excellent books (Book I & II, published 1987 and 2004, respectively) on the cemeteries of Garrett County, Maryland. Volunteers tirelessly travelled the county transcribing the information from thousands of gravestones. The DAR Book I lists the gravestones as they were found within the cemetery, while Book II records the people's names alphabetically. Book II, which is in part, a supplement to Book I, lists and summarizes many cemeteries not previously cited. These books have become invaluable tools to many Garrett County genealogists and are now called the “Graves Books”.

Regrettably, images of Garrett County gravestones are hard to find and not available to most people. This book presents nearly thousand gravestone images (digital photographs), containing 1,187 names from 44 cemeteries, of Garrett County, Maryland. Maps for each cemetery have been included with the images. These images constitute a portion of gravestones within Garrett County, MD, but represent some of the oldest families (Browning, Custer, Frantz, Frazee, Friend, Glotfelty, Harvey, Hinebaugh, McRobie) of the county. These cemeteries, with there gravestones, will be presented in the same alphabetically order as listed in the DAR Graves Book I & II.
